Yearbook

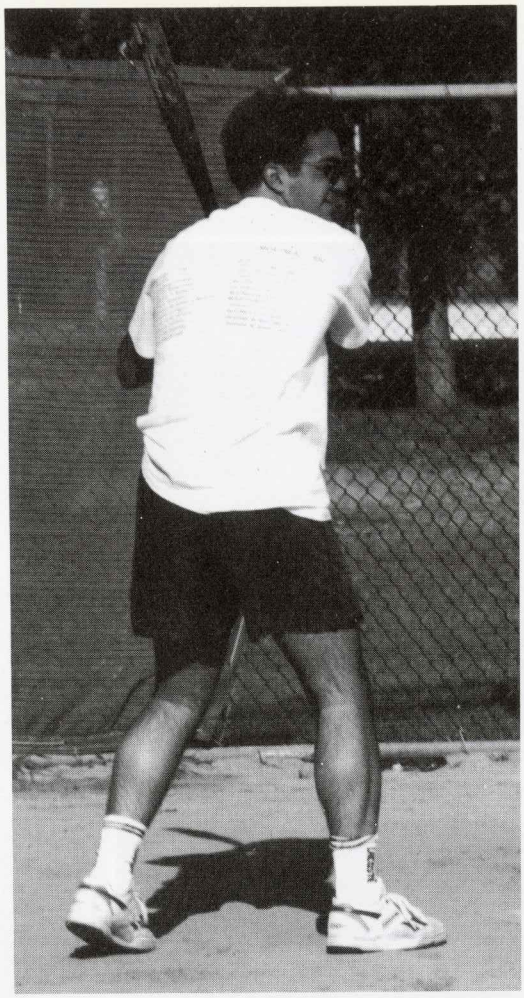
WELCOME!

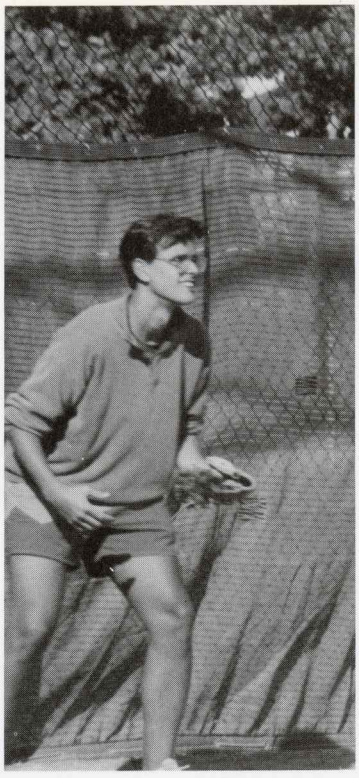
The Yearbook Organizers: Peter Valiquet, Chantal Kayem, and Wael Fayad.

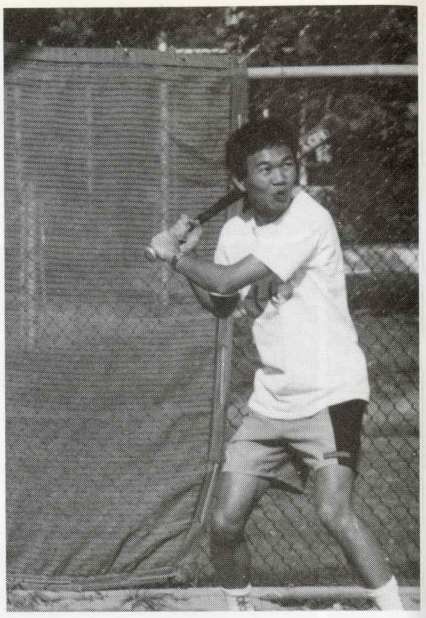
Welcome to the 1993 MBA/MSc yearbook. We all hope that the pages to follow incorporate the many good times and memorable moments that we have all had during this past year. The many smiling faces will hopefully remind you that despite all those rough moments of deadlines, midterms, finals, presentations, projects, PAA's and the remainder of utter hell, we all managed to come out of it alive and happy. I'm sure we would all choose to do it all over again!

Good luck to all the graduating students. We are sure that the inexistent social life and the many sleepless nights will pay off someday (real soon hopefully!).

Take good care,
Chantal Kayem, Editor in Chief







Come on Baby. I'm ready for you!

M.B.A. FUN IN THE SUN

The first group event of the 1992-1993 school year was the annual softball game. Held this year at Hampstead Park, the event proved to be a lot of fun. With the weather co-operating, a great number of commerce graduate students showed up although I spent 20 minutes looking for them only to find them taking the sun behind a grassy knoll. Curiously, a majority of them had no previous exposure to the game and the results proved quite interesting. After splitting up the teams, the fun began. The Lebanese connection proved to be the focus of the afternoon. Wael led the pack with his expert batting style and professional fielding techniques. Nicolas showed some good power at the plate but unfortunately started running up the third base line and was easy prey. Khalil proved to be the hero of the day taking a ball right on the schnoz. He was OK but the battle wound would be a story he could tell his grandchildren. After spending about 3 hours on the field, and chasing down many balls, we decided to call it a day. After munching and gulping the refreshments, we ended the afternoon by planning the traditional pub night and then each went our own way. Special thanks to George Sew who brought extra baseball mitts and balls so that everyone could enjoy in the fun.

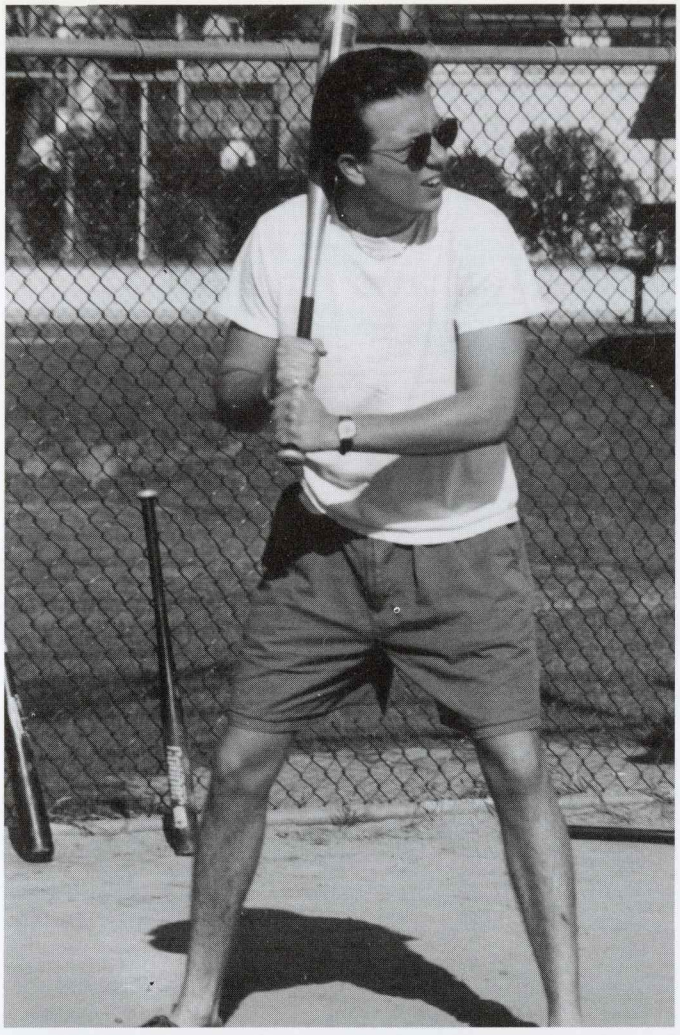
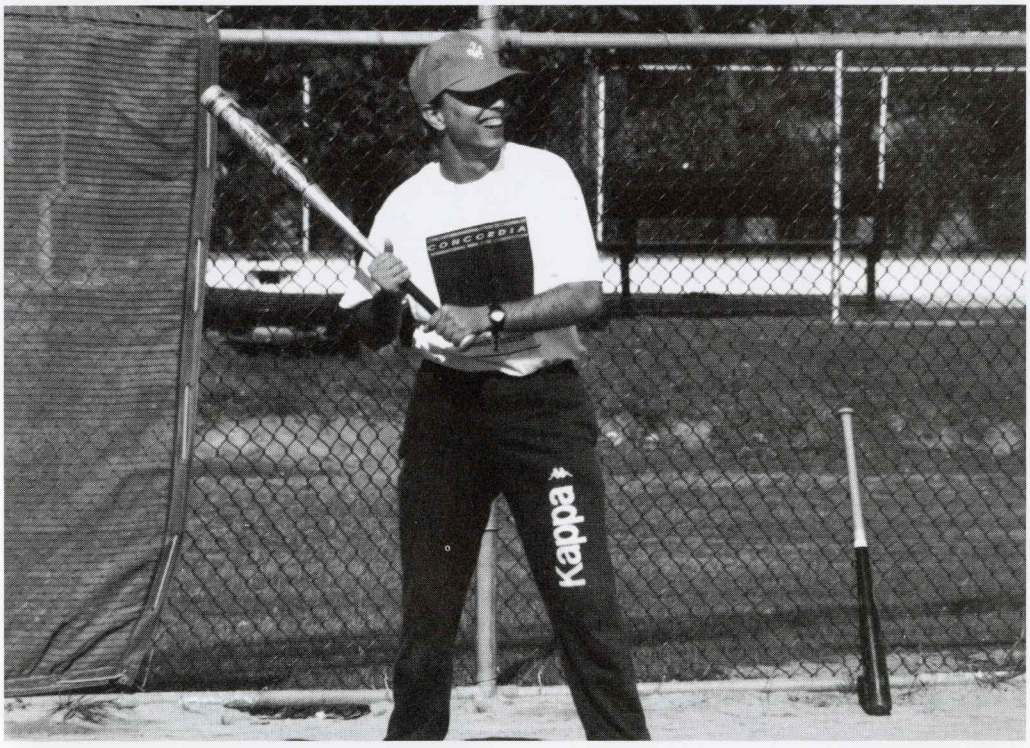
Ooh! Ooh! Here it comes.



I'm too sexy for my bat!

Give it to 'em Jeff.



Not too bad Wael, for your first time.

Pleeease take your hands off me.

Berny, what do you think you're doing!

That's what the M.B.A. is all about.

Just take that bloody picture.

Really, it's that big!

God, please let us make it through the M.B.A. alive!

Things look much better from this angle.

Say "cheese".

Goood boy.

I can't help it if she loves me!

Vera Merandi, who organized this very successful event, spoke on the behalf of Concordia's MBA students.

THE AWARDS OF DISTINCTION LUNCHEON

The fifth Annual Awards of Distinction Luncheon was held on Friday, November 13, 1992 at the Bonaventure Hilton Hotel. Like everything we Concordians put our minds to, it was a great success. Business professionals and students had the opportunity to mingle in an environment other than school, and both had a good time.

The honoured guests were Madeleine Saint Jacques, President Young & Rubicam Montreal, Frank Knowles, Deputy Chairman Power Corp., Philippe de Gaspé Beaubien, President Telemedia, and Sid Stevens, Executive Vice President Sun Youth Organization. To compliment these distinguished recipients, the guest list included extremely prestigious names - Bell Canada, Royal Bank, Pepsico, Avon, Power Corp., Standard Life, and many others.

The success of this event was guaranteed due to the people who were involved. Everybody did a great job, not only those who volunteered but also all of you who attended: you all projected a professional image of Concordia's MBA and MSc programs. I would like to add that, even though I didn't wear two watches, everything ran like clockwork, and even during my speech, I didn't forget to introduce anybody. Thanks to all who helped make this year's Awards of Distinction the success that it was.

Vera Merandi

Seated: The Recipients (From Left to Right): Philippe de Gaspé Beaubien, Madeleine Saint-Jacques, Sid Stevens, and Frank Knowles were recognized for their outstanding performance in finance, commerce, and community services.

Dr. Christopher Ross, Dean of Concordia's faculty of Commerce and Administration, spoke about the faculty's aims in creating links between the business community and the academic realm.

300 people from numerous companies in diverse industries attended the luncheon.

Isn't he a bit young for you Mark?

CHRISTMAS 1992: A RETROSPECTIVE

A lot of people were dancing. I remember that pretty well, but not much else, I'm afraid. I guess that the party was really, very crowded, although I may have been fooled by four or five people who deliberately hovered around me all night, obstructing my view of the otherwise empty room behind them.

There was food though. I don't know this for sure, but it is there in the picture. It seems to me that there was a nice fresh pumpernickel on the table, but somebody had viciously gutted the thing and filled it with green stuff. Some people have so little respect for bread. This really saddens me greatly.

I vaguely remember . . . remember . . . remember . . . a well dressed man. He talked to me for what seemed like hours but I couldn't understand him. I kept telling him, "I don't speak Turkish", but to no avail. I do seem to remember someone yelling "Lindo", or something to that effect, and having a wooden pole thrust into my forehead. Then everything went blank.

The only memory of the night that is reasonably clear is finding myself prostrate on the dance floor while tiny people ran about me in a frenzy. Then the little people raised my body in the air, carried me to the top of the mountain and claimed me as their god. But still, the memory is vague at best.

A GATEWAY TO SELF-ACCOMPLISHMENT

Graduating from the Concordia Professional MBA program, one feels that his/her horizon has been broadened along dimensions other than that of pure academic knowledge. The richness of the experience stems mainly from the diversity of the educational, professional, and cultural backgrounds of the students, as well as the educational approaches the program entails.

People who have lived in different parts of the world and who have been immersed in different undergraduate and professional orientations - from architecture to dentistry to engineering to music - get the chance to work together in groups, thus further developing their teamwork abilities while discovering the validity of a logic and way of thinking other than their own. Cultural enlightenment is also gained from the cosmopolitan nature of the program, which exposes the student to values and beliefs different from his/her own. Finally, scientists and engineers would benefit from - while in some cases struggling through - courses delivered through the case method of learning, while arts-degree holders might be inspired from ones that follow a highly-structured theoretical approach.

Hence, going through the Concordia MBA program is like a step further on the way out of Plato's cave or toward Clarke's outer universe: re-thinking one's own attitudes and beliefs while acquiring and developing abilities, thus evolving into a wiser and more accomplished being.

A WORD FROM THE GRADS . . .

"To sum it up, the MBA is a credibility tool and a confidence builder. The people in the program helped to create a positive and co-operative atmosphere."

Tom Belch

"A tribute to Joe Kelly. You're a great one Joe"

VTSU

"I think I have been involved in one large Virtual Reality experiment controlled by Joe Kelly and Prof. Khalifa."

G-Meister

What would you like to forget about most in the MBA?

"1 - Teachers who - because of their lack of organization hindered my learning and forced me to spend more time preparing for an exam.
2 - Courses I attended in the Hall and LaSalle Bldgs.
3 - The Norris Library
4 - The nightmares I had the night before my marketing exams."

Khalil

Question: "Where do you find Argentineans, Chinese, Turks, and Lebanese?"

Answer: a) The United Nations
b) A Toronto streetcar
c) The Concordia MBA
d) All of the above

Tom Belch (the answer is d, by the way)

The Concordia MBA program has been a great benefit to me. By the end of the first semester, I had learned enough to understand that the investment in my education would never be recovered.

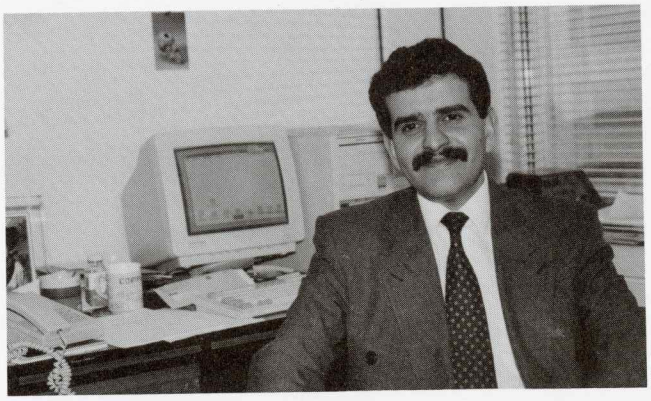
How many Concordia MBA students does it take to change a lightbulb?

1) 1, we're graduate students for God's sake
2) 1n e, I told you we're grad students
3) uno, hana, eins, echa, wahhad, ichi, il, unum . . . we're international students after all
4) 4, one to state the problem, a second to analyze the situation, a third to propose alternatives, and a fourth to give a recommendation and implementation

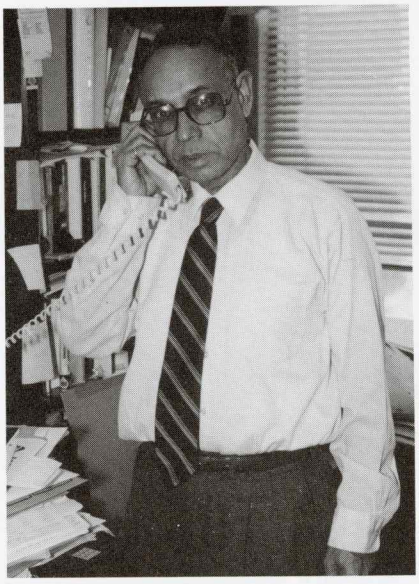
"The MBA gave me a great opportunity to meet and interact closely in an uncompetitive environment with all kinds of friendly people as I never have before. I had a great time and will cherish these moments greatly. Thanks to everyone."

THE PROFESSORS

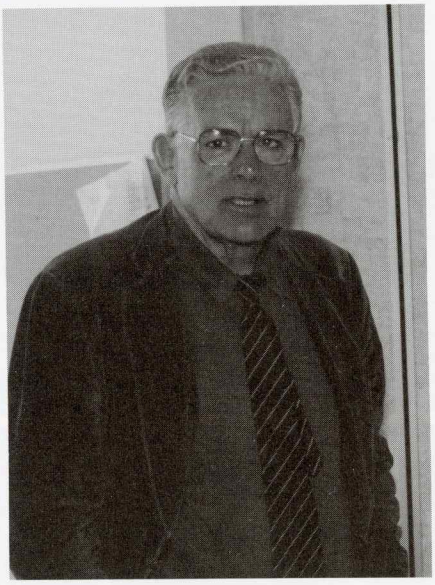


"Badges? We don't need no stinking badges"!

"Don't hate me because I'm beautiful"!



"Hallo. You failed . . . who is this?"

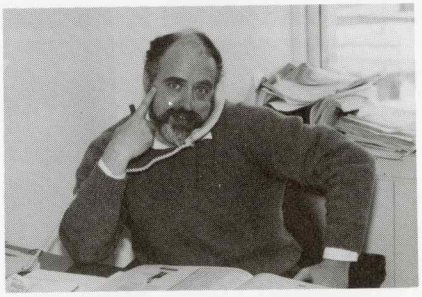


Prof. Kelly, whose special videotaping experiment on us we could never forget.

Please, please we want more work!

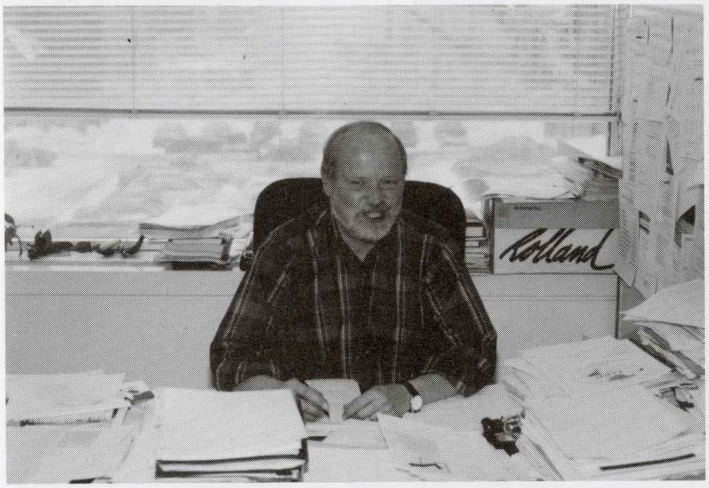
▲Sort of a Barracuda, he is when it comes to international business!

◀Thanks, only you could make Stats exciting. (We're trying to make up for last year's yearbook!)

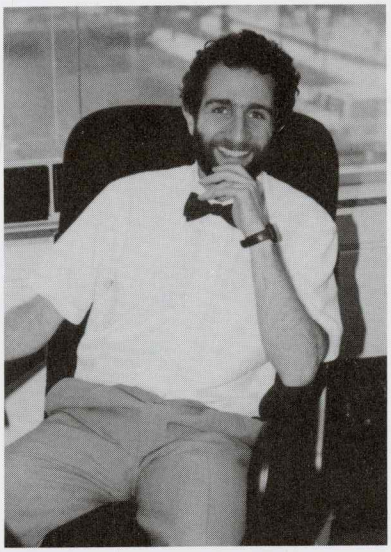


"Hallo, the Montreal General? I've got crazy glue stuck on my finger!"

THE CREW



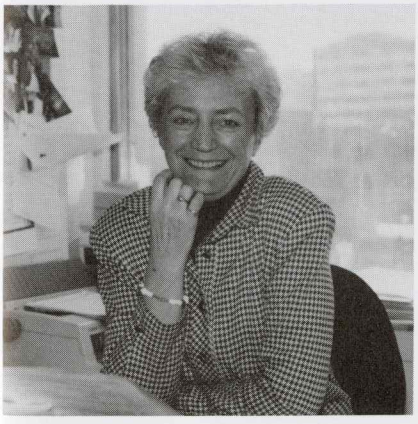
"Whatever you do, don't sneeze!"



By day, a mild-mannered student coordinator, by night, a Basket Robins man.

"Don't you know there's a recession out there?"

"Karate is my life!"



"Kiss me, I'm Irish!"

"Of course I like my boss . . . now leave me alone!"

The Concordia Team: Bernard Tourillon, Tracy Best, Randy Mauskopf, and Marc Shwec with coach Henri Colas. They were so close to winning the event yet they were winners in the eyes of all of us.

The thrill of winning the competition is well shown here by the Otago team.

THE WINNERS:

At first, everybody wondered what the defending champions from New Zealand, who entered the competition for the first time last year, would be able to achieve. As it turned out, they were the winners for the second year in a row! Congratulations.

The second place winners were from Dalhousie University. Their performance in the final was like that of champions. Yet, in competitions, there will always be a first and a second.

A message from the organizers

Yes, we insisted to last year's organizers, we know how much work is involved. Certainly, we nodded, we agree to give up our summer, social life and sanity. We really want to organize the 1993 Case Competition.

In retrospect, we never could have realized the work involved, the hours spent and the sleep lost (What?? September already, and only $200 raised??) We also never realized the sense of achievement and personal satisfaction that comes from organizing an event of this magnitude. It has been an unparalleled experience for each one of us. We made new contacts - we met New Zealanders, New Brunswickers and New Englanders, and most importantly, remained steadfast friends throughout.

Thanks to the many volunteers; from our loyal assistants to the super team and judge moderators. To Murat and his 7:45am meetings, to Paul "name tag" Primavesi, and to Vera, who will forever wear 2 watches, a very special THANK YOU!!! We got a lot more out of it than a mere six credits . . . a hint for next years organizers - Walkie Talkies are not toys.

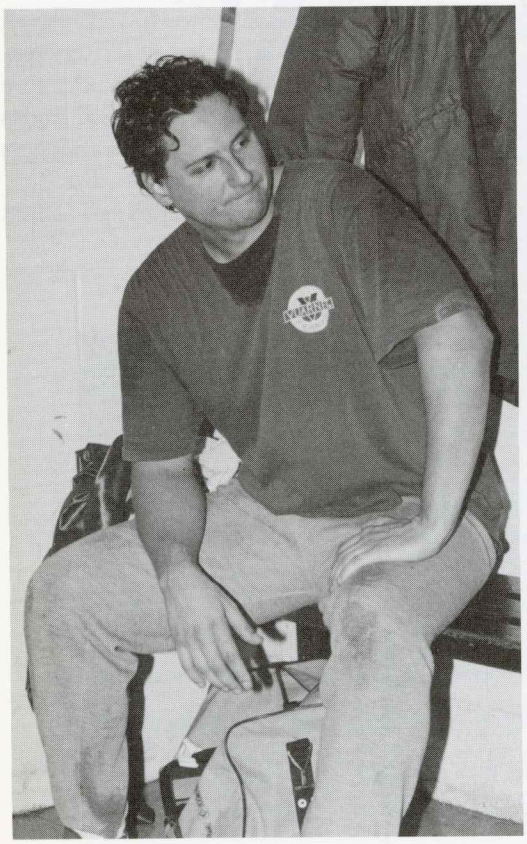
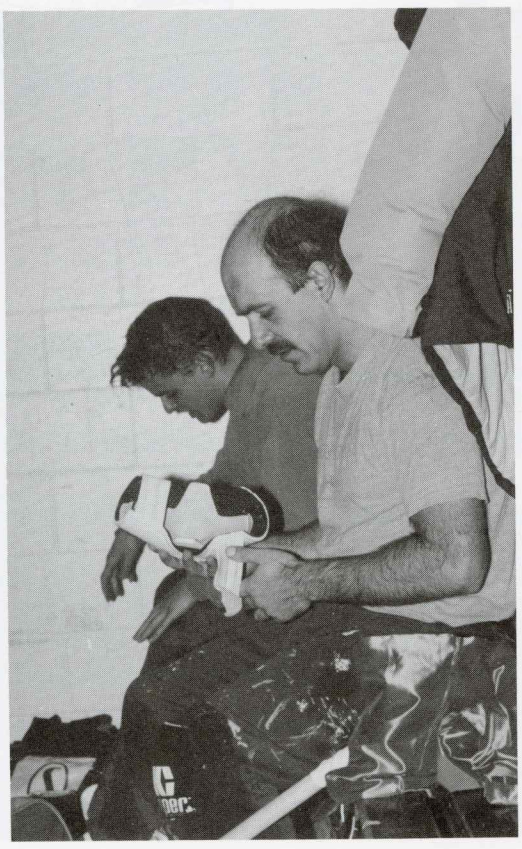
BROOMBALL

The Team: Top Row: Tom Marshall, Bernard Tourillon, Mario Ruiz, Eric Tardif, and Jeff Rosemblum. Bottom Row: Serge Ghattas, Nancy Wells, Miriam Blumer, and Claudio Vendittelli.



"I could use some Right Guard now!"



"I'm sorry Claudio. I just don't love you anymore!"

The expectations put on this year's Hostile Takeovers broomball team was enormous after last years successful campaign. This year's team included Serge "Cellular" Ghattas the best equipped player by far, Eric "The Viking" Tardif with all the right moves on defence. The capacity crowds were treated to spectacular playmaking by the likes of Tom "The Bomb" Marshall, Mario "Boom-Boom" Ruiz and Claudio "Mafia" Vendittelli. Miriam Blumer blossomed as a premier goal tender leading the team to the playoffs. The first playoff game matched the good guys against the ever chippy Green Machine, a team Gerry "Knuckles" Crotty rubbed elbows with on several occasions. On this day Gerry's team outscored the opposition and moved onto the finals. Nancy Wells' pregame pep-talk was not enough as the Takeovers seemed like hangovers and lost in the final again. Twice the bridesmaid is pretty hard to live with. Hopefully next years team will have what it takes to go all the way.

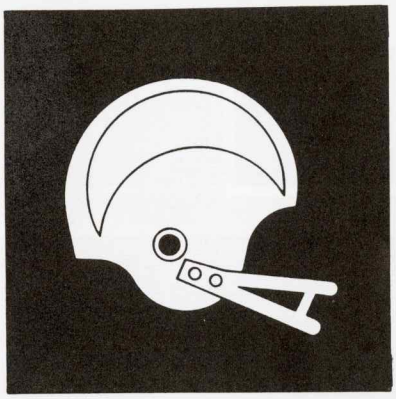
THE SUPER BOWL AND CURLING PARTY

In January, as the snow strains the boughs, the ineffable sportsperson sees his or her thoughts turn to that quintessential annual event: the grunts, the sweat, the scantily-clad cheer-leaders . . . Superbowl!



This year, the Royal Montreal Curling Club offered its hallowed halls to Concordia's finest. The event saw the die-hard and the dabbler alike gather for one reason: to see the Cowboys trounce the Bills. Though we happy few sat focused before the TV god, Peter would inquire the next day: "Who took it anyway?" How easily we are distracted by two ladies' kind attention!

Although the day was a sacred football observance, the adventuresome among us practised the peculiar Canadian pastime of curling. And, though the Adonis-like shape of those partaking regularly of the sport tells of its physical demands, we nevertheless did not stain Concordia's reputation. Indeed, Tom's athletic prowess in this, as in all things, sent murmurs of chemical enhancement travelling among the regulars. How jealously they guard their sport!

Keynote address to the 20th reunion of Concordia MBA class of 1993

(A special feature brought to you by Jeff R., Randy M., Robert J., and Eric T.)

"Thank you and welcome once again to the 20th reunion of the 1993 graduate class of the Concordia MBA. We've all had a wonderful meal and now it's time to look back on the last 20 years and see just how well we've all done.

It's gratifying to see such a large turnout in light of the current recession as well as the heaviest snowstorm since the year 2002.

Over the past 6 months, my colleagues and I have been hard at work compiling information on what you've all been doing. Thank you for your enthusiastic response.

Perhaps now, we could share a few of these with you. . .

Ritta Lee After a 12-year stint as Chief Executive Officer of IBM, Ritta is currently marketing her own line of specialty teas under the catchy name: "If I Drink It, It's Darn Well Good Enough for You"

Bernard Tourillon In the year 2013, Bernard "Boesky" Tourillon can often be found on a barstool at Chicago's. Despite a successful career as a securities trader, Bernard is sometimes seen crying into his beer, moaning, "Case Comp, Maudite, we were so close."

Khalil Feghali Frustrated with the insurance industry, Khalil moved to the deep south and became a country and western singer. After a string of mildly successful hits, Khalil is currently riding high on the charts with an acoustic banjo version of "I'm Too Sexy" . . . We are also pleased to announce that, in the coming year, Khalil will marry Yoko Ono.

Chantal Kayem As of our last contact, Chantal was still working on the 1993 yearbook.

Vera Merandi At the 2012 Olympics, the elusive three-minute mile was broken by our very own Louise Brunet in the remarkable time of 1 minute, 35 seconds. The time-keeper was Vera Merandi.

Tracy Best became a goddess in a remote region of the world where she was revered by all her followers.

Lucy Iaccobucci Since 1996, Lucy has done extensive research in the area of déja vu.

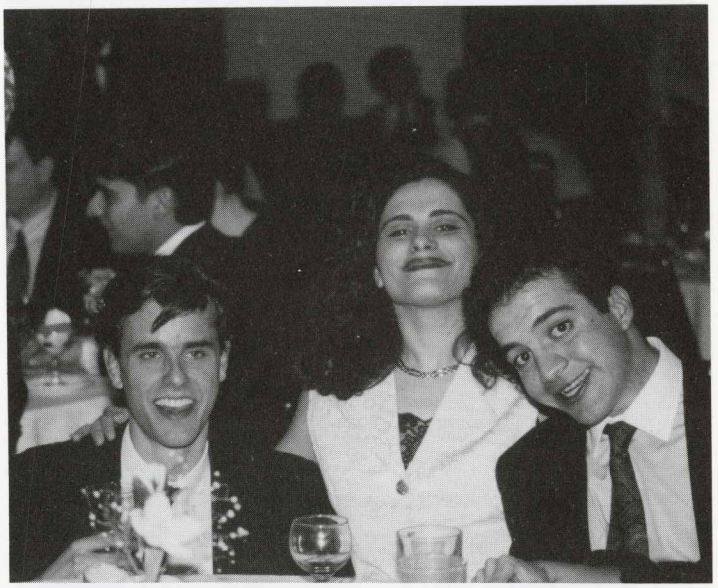
Mario Ruiz In the year 2009, Mario Ruiz became the CEO of Breweries. To his credit, production levels for the fiscal year 2010 were up 26%. Mysteriously, however, sales and inventory had dropped 10% over the same year. Mr. Ruiz could not be reached for comment.

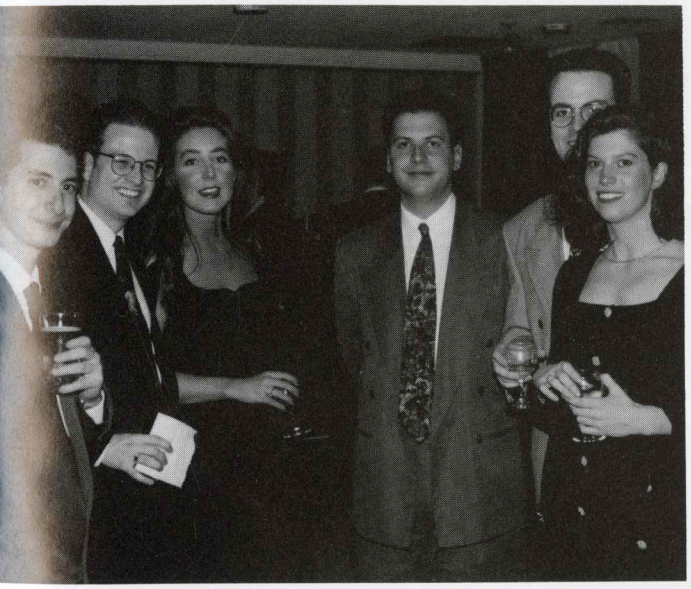
Tom Belch In 1995, Tom was hired by Nestlé Enterprises Limited where he would later pioneer a line of baby formulas named, simply . . . Belch.

Gerry Crotty In the year 2010, science was finally able to prove that Gerry Crotty did not, in fact, exist.

Marc Shwec Toward the end of the 20th century, Marc became the undisputed king of late-night info-mercials, replacing Ron Popeil as the poster boy for the "Hair Club for Men."

Nicolas Rubeiz After years of relative obscurity, Nicholas became a cult leader in Waco, Texas.





Mark Hornstein . . . Nothing!

Tom Marshall By 1997, Tom had forsaken the world of business. After a brief flirtation with institutional management, he became a performance artist in New Mexico and now specializes in interpretive dance.

Myriam Blumer Eight years after graduation, Myriam became VP of new product development at Nike Corporation. Perhaps her most widely recognized achievement is a line of teflon underwear for men called . . . Blumers.

Nancy Wells After reaching the semi-finals of the 1998 edition of American Gladiators, Nancy found fame and fortune as the captain of the Bronx Bombers Roller Derby Team. Her stage name: Spartacus.

Louise Brunet After winning the Hawaiian Iron Man competition 4 years in a row, Louise recently became spokeswoman for Right Guard.

Sam Ifergan Having completed his 14th university degree, Sam has recently left the halls of academia to pursue a career at NCR Canada. Sam will reportedly be entering the same position he held before starting his MBA, 22 years ago.

Paul Primavesi After a brief sojourn as comptroller for Power Corporation, Paul joined a little known punk band, "Dead Men Can't Discount". In the year 2003, the band rose to the top of the UK charts with a string of number 1 singles including: "Whip Me, Whip Me, Whip Me"

Wael Fayad Soon after graduation, Wael began a career making instructional videos for pre-schoolers on behalf of the pharmaceutical industry. His credits include: "Aspirin: If it Hurts, Swallow It" - Parts I, II and III and - "Willy Wonka & the Penicillin Factory"

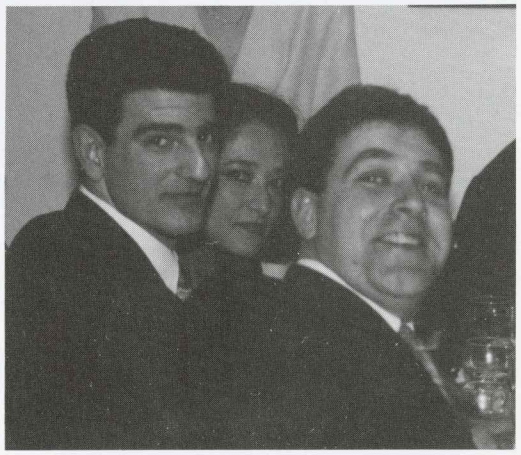
Murat Serpen Murat Serpen became the dictator of a small Middle-Eastern country. Sources close to Sheik Abu Murat say that they can't understand him either.

Randy Mauskopf After graduation in 1993, Randy turned his talents to writing. Over the past 20 years, Randy has published several self-help books including the national bestseller "You, Too, Can Be Better than Murat".

Rob Gervais Until recently, Rob worked as a door-to-door salesman, selling the "Skull Blower" an 8,000 watt hair dryer in the Topeka, Kansas area. Tragically however, while demonstrating the product, Rob accidentally reversed polarity and the Skull Blower became the Skull Sucker. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to "Marc Shwec's Hair Club for Men".

Jeff Rosenblum After securing a steady supply of used furniture from the Salvation Army, Jeff opened a home furnishings store. Today, when you walk by his storefront, it is said that you can still hear him say, "What . . . a hundred dollars? You're robbing me! . . . Take it, get outta here!"

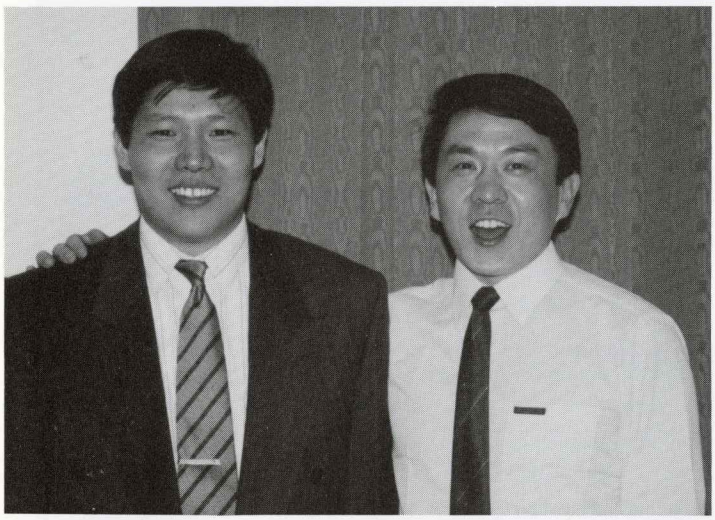
Well, folks . . . this is our future MSc Rep. Is this an indication of what is in store for future MSc's (Party!)?

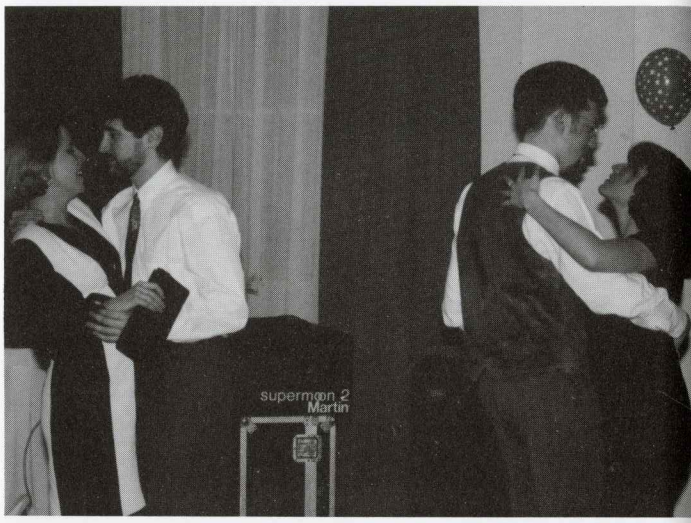


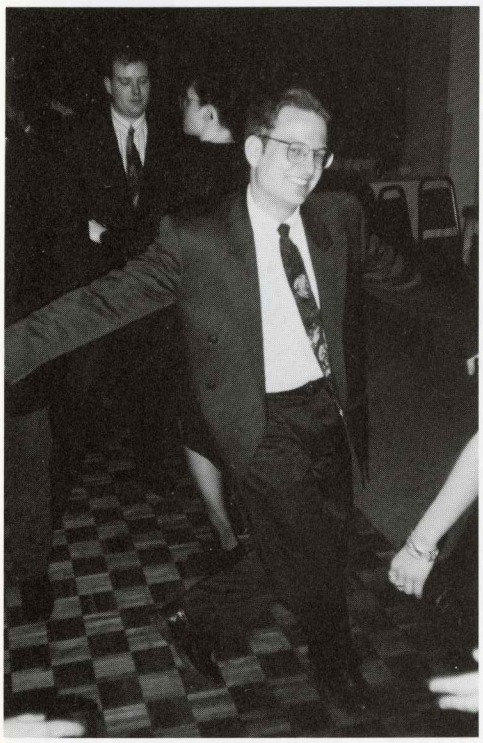
"Call 1-976-STUD"!

"Twist and Shout! Twist and Shout!"

"Let the good times roll"







"Mmmh, Jello . . . and for only 30 bucks!"

Dancing, who needs it? I'm just too sensual!

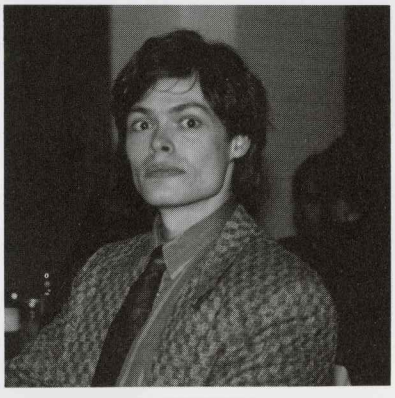
The old Student Council . . . Going, Going . . . Gone! (Tom Marshall, Murat Serpen, Todd Scarfone, Gerry Crotty, Tracy Best, Chantal Kayem, Nicolas Rubeiz, Eric Tardif, & Marc Hornstein)

The new Student Council . . . gluttons for punishment! (Rania Ijhaish, Joyce Rabih, Andrew Szyngiel, Peter Valiquet, Serge Ghattas, Gill Collins, Eric Tardif, & Shirley Skutnik (not shown))

Concordia's MBA Small Business Consulting Bureau . . . the slick, smart, and jobless! (Jeff Rosenblum, Murat Serpen, and Randy Mauskopf)

"Why do anything when you look as good as me?"

"Wow, check him out! Do you think he's single?"



"Will you respect me in the morning?"

"I can't help it if they all love me!"
